POINT TO PONDER....."Is more P.E. at school linked to higher student math scores?"

The amount of time students spend doing physical activity in school appears to be linked to higher standardised math scores in D.C. schools, according to a new American University study that examined the success of the city's Healthy Schools Act and found that schools offering more physical activity had significantly better math success. "This finding demonstrates that students' academic performance improves when there's a balance between time spent on physical education and time spent on learning," said Stacey Snelling, dean of American University's School of Education.

STUDENT ATHLETE CARD - Discount Meal Vouchers:

In conjunction with RYE and The Burrito Brothers restaurants, Greenpark School will be presenting every student who has played a sport in 2016 with an Athlete's Card. This card entitles the student to a free kids meal every time they patron either of the two restaurants with a paying adult. This offer is for the whole of 2016. Cards can be collected from the Sports Office.

Thank you to Warren and Megan Lippi-Smith for their generous sponsorship.

Those students who have not collected their card can do so from the Sports Office.
